Computer Vision

Computer vision enables computers to interpret information from images and videos.

Object detection identifies objects and their locations within images.

Image classification, object detection, and image segmentation are common computer vision tasks.